A PARABLE WITH A MORAL.

Once a farmer had 2000 bushels of wheat, which he did not sell in bulk as he usually did, but sold it in one-bushel lots to 2000 different people.

A few of them paid in cash, but by far the greater number said it was not convenient to pay just then; they would call in a few days and settle.

As the months passed on the man's bank account dwindled away until there was only $3.15 left, and he did not have the coin to buy seed wheat for the spring sowing.

"How is this," he murmured? "My 2000 bushels of wheat should have kept me in affluence until another crop came in, but I have parted with my grain and hold instead a vast number of small accounts so widely scattered over the country that it is impossible to get around and collect them fast enough to pay expenses."

So he posted a notice saying all who are indebted to me for one bushel, come and settle quickly. A few came, but the majority said, "Oh, that's not much, it is such a small matter, I will attend to it some time," forgetting that each amount though small, amounted to a large sum when put together.

Things went on in this manner for some time, and finally his mental anguish was so great, that he woke up and found he had only been dreaming, and that the 2000 bushels of wheat were still safe in the granary.

Moral—The next day this man came to the editor of the paper, and said: "Here is that dollar I owe you. I stood in the position of an editor last night for several hours, and I know just how it is to have several hundred small amounts due, that would require a considerable outlay for two-cent stamps to write to each one; and he added, I sincerely trust every reader of your paper will go and do likewise."—Owl Town Bunghole.

Mr. Roosevelt Scores.

Public sentiment is still a powerful factor in our public affairs, especially when it supports an aggressive and determined man who wields the great power of the Presidency.

It seems reasonably certain now that Congress will follow the suggestion of the President and make the concessions to Cuba demanded by the American sense of fair play. In other words, the President has won in the first clash with Congress, but it is the joint triumph of Mr. Roosevelt and public sentiment. This is a case in which either without the other would have been powerless. This is a combination that even the House oligarchy cannot resist, and it will not require many experiences of this character to induce the House leaders to take some precaution to avoid a clash with the White House. There is, however, nothing else in sight about which there is a prospect of serious differences.

Nothing that has happened since the accession of President Roosevelt has so unmistakably demonstrated who is the real leader in Washington.

As long as the President is so cordially supported by public sentiment as he is in this affair his leadership will be in no danger.

Coldest Spot on Earth.

The coldest spot on earth where human beings exist is a little town in the valley of Lena, in Siberia, called Werchajansk. Hundreds of people in that village have lived to a ripe old age, and yet the thermometer in that town has been known to descend to the cavernous figure of 98.4 degrees below zero. The average temperature in Werchajansk during the winter months is 74.8

degrees below zero. The Werchajansk soil is permanently frozen to a depth of 380 feet, and yet, during the month of July the temperature of Werchajansk is on the average 69 degrees above zero, the same as that of Paris.

Col. Jere Baxter, president of the Tennessee Central railroad, says there has been no change in the status of the road; that its finances are in good shape, and that the work of consolidating the various divisions into one line is progressing.
